Appeals

Nexus ICA seeks to uphold values of integrity and accountability in all areas of operation, as per the Student Code of Conduct. However, sometimes outcomes of certain procedures may not be as you expected, or you may believe that an error has taken place. When this happens, you can choose to appeal the decision made. The UWL policy linked below outlines:

- Which processes and decisions can be appealed
- Appropriate grounds for appeal, and reasons that will typically not be seen to be legitimate
- How to submit an appeal claim
- The procedures followed during the appeals process
- What to do if you're not satisfied with the outcome of an appeal

UWL Policy

The UWL policy for Appeals can be found here:

Nexus ICA Processes

All academic appeals should be directed to the University of West London as per the policy above.

In instances of non-academic appeal, such as regarding student disciplinary cases or admissions, the relevant complaints process should be followed where the final stage of complaint results in a review by the University of West London. Should you be unhappy with the process of your complaint, you may access the Office of the Independent Adjudicator for further review, as per the complaints processes.
